

Alan Sieler Director and Executive Coach

Alan Sieler is the founder and Director of Newfield Institute, an international coaching, consulting and training company.

Alan has been an Executive Coach for more than fourteen years and his professional experience in education, training and consulting is extensive – having worked with multinational corporations and national organisations from Australia, New Zealand, Hong Kong, China, Singapore, the United States and South Africa. Alan focuses on the communication processes that build a collaborative and high performance organisational culture.

Alan's approach to coaching has been ground-breaking. He has designed and leads the Asia-Pacific region's most in-depth and comprehensive coach-training program – the Vocational Graduate Diploma of Ontological Coaching - which is an accredited qualification in the Australian Vocational Education System. Alan has developed a methodology that not only has a holistic focus, but also facilitates profound positive and lasting change within individuals and organisations.

Alan is a world leader in advanced coaching, and has written extensively on the relevance of Ontology to living, working, learning and coaching, including two books. His Coaching to the Human Soul publications are being used in organisational development in such corporations as NASA, Hewlett Packard and Intel. Both books are also being used in coaching and leadership programs in universities in the United States, South Africa and Australia, as well as other coach training courses.
