

Ian Higginbottom Organisational Coach and Consultant

Ian Higginbottom is an organisational and leadership coach operating as a Canberra-based Alliance Partner of Newfield Institute.

Ian partners with organisations, businesses and work-teams to develop highly effective working relationships, facilitate the development of high performance teams and to generate effective cultural transformation. He does this by focussing on the quality of the interpersonal interactions that are at the heart of organisational effectiveness.

Ian provides one-on-one coaching for individuals in middle and senior management and leadership positions.

Prior to working as coach and trainer Ian gained 15 years experience as a business leader and senior manager in the Hobart based software company Myriax Pty Ltd which he founded with two colleagues in 1995. Ian drove the company's focus on quality communication, exceptional service, and excellence to build an export business with worldwide markets. He understands firsthand the value of coaching to develop leadership capacity and to expand a person's sense of what is possible for them.

A qualified Ontological Practitioner, Ian applies ontological distinctions and practices in coaching and in the design and facilitation of programs to facilitate team success, productivity and sustainable change.

Ian now works with a range of clients in the government, not-for-profit and business sectors in Australia.
